VEHICLE CATCHES FIRE

Machines Collide West Of Town; Light Pole Broken Off By Impact

Two employees of a Columbus packing company were burned and taken to Berger Hospital for treatment and Nelson Warner, Stoutsville, a bookkeeper for the Circleville Savings and Banking Co., suffered a slight concussion Monday at 8 a. m. when a David Davies Packing Co. truck and the Warner car collided a mile west of Stoutsville on the Stoutsville Pike.

Occupants of the truck were Irving Rubenstein, 26, YMCA, Columbus, salesman for David Davies, who suffered third degree burns, and John Reidmiller, 38, 61 West Park Avenue, company truck driver, who was burned about the hands. Reidmiller's condition was not serious, hospital authorities said. Rubenstein was burned on the face and neck.

Sheriff's officers who checked the accident said that apparently neither driver saw the other, the two vehicles colliding at the top of a hill in front of the Howard Huston residence.

Both Truckers Leap

Flames broke through the cab of the meat truck almost immediately, forcing both Rubenstein and Reidmiller to jump free, the truck crashing into a light pole, breaking it off near the ground. The end of a broken power line dangled on the ground, burning the grass for several feet around it, and the truck came to rest on its top with the four wheels in the air.

Warner's car was turned half-way round in the road by the impact, its left front side badly damaged. Firemen were called as flames enveloped the truck and the meat began to burn. At 10 a. m., two hours after the accident they were reported to have the fire under control.

Rubenstein and Reidmiller were taken to Berger Hospital by Howard Huston.

Harry Briggs, Pickaway County Farm Bureau manager, who was following some distance behind the Warner car, said that he first noticed the accident as the smoke began pouring from the truck. He said he believed the gasoline tank must have exploded almost immediately after the collision.

At the closing session of the meeting, the Veterans named Robert R. Bingham, of Wilmington, as the new president, and then selected Akron as the 1942 convention city.

On duty was Officer Lawrence Matteson when the armed pair entered the station. He said one of the bandits appeared to be only about 15 years of age while the other was about 25. After locking him in a cell, the bandits smashed the police radio. Matteson was able to release himself by breaking the lock on a wooden door of the cell, the bandit failing to lock the outer steel doors.

INVOLVEMENT IS CLOSER

Four Moves Possibilities; "Tremendous Decision" May Be Soon

WASHINGTON, May 19—Prevailing opinion in Washington, that the United States is moving swiftly toward a full partnership in Britain's war against Germany, heightened today with indications that President Roosevelt is on the verge of a tremendous decision.

White House, State Department and Capitol Hill circles are drenched with a variety of rumors as to what new major step the President can take to help embattled Britain. A vast majority of opinion in these circles holds that whatever the step proves to be, it will lead inevitably to United States involvement in war with Germany. There are few dissenters.

This belief is strengthened by the fact that an increasing number of high administration officials and presidential advisers are declaring that the present American lease-lend aid to Britain is not sufficient to guarantee a British victory over Germany. If Britain falls, they add, the security of the United States is endangered. Non-interventionists, challenging this new note, call such con-

UNCLE SAM ASKS HIGHER TAX ON EXCISE PROFITS

WASHINGTON, May 19 — The administration today called on congress to levy stiff corporate excess profits levies so that a major part of profits from defense production will be "returned to the people in taxes."

Appearing before the House ways and means committee, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John L. Sullivan asked the adoption of a plan which would tax "both defense profits and excess profits," which, he said, the present law "does not do."

Sullivan told the committee that at present, "the profits of a good many business firms are not being touched by the tax, although some of those profits are excess profits by any reasonable standard."

"Here is certainly a place to broaden the base," he added.

Sullivan recommended that the basis for figuring excess profits tax liabilities be revised to bring a larger share of corporate incomes under the tax. As an alternative, he suggested that the principle of excess profits taxation be abandoned and that corporate income taxes be increased "by enough to produce the desired revenue."

COLUMBUS YOUTH, DRIVER OF DEATH CAR, PAROLED

Judge Meeker Terwilliger, Monday, granted a parole to Willard C. Thalgett, 24-year-old Columbus youth indicted by the April grand jury on charges of second degree manslaughter.

The Columbus youth, who crashed his car over a 15-foot embankment on the CCC highway near Harrisburg New Year's morning, bringing injuries which resulted in the death of his companion, Miss Leota Snyder, 25, Columbus nurse, has been free under $1,000 bond.

The parole was granted Monday after parents of Miss Snyder asked that the charges not be pressed. Charges were filed by State Highway Patrolman E. P. Wells. Terms of the parole provide that Thalgett violate no laws and that he refrain from the use of intoxicating liquors.

Duce's Duke In Ethiopia Surrenders

Aosta Turns Stronghold Of Amba Alagi Over To British Forces

ROME, May 19 — Surrender of Amba Alagi in Ethiopia to British forces was announced by the Italian high command today. The communique said the Duke of Aosta, Italian viceroy of Ethiopia, has been taken prisoner.

Italian troops at Amba Alagi capitulated after offering resistance which, the communique said, had been "prolonged to utmost" before they were forced to cease fighting.

"In recognition of their bravery," the bulletin added, "our troops were allowed to keep their weapons."

CAIRO, May 19—British troops today entered the northern Ethiopian city of Amba Alagi — last major Fascist stronghold in Empire Haile Selassie's domain.

Victorious British forces marched into the city after the Duke of Aosta, Italian viceroy of Ethiopia, accepted terms of surrender stipulated by the British in negotiations which began on Friday.

Official announcement of the triumph at Amba Alagi was made in a communique which said the northwestern Egyptian town of Solham still is in British hands.

(On Saturday the Germans claimed to have recaptured Solham after conceding the previous day that it had been seized by the British. The Nazi communique on Saturday claimed the British had been driven out by a joint Italo-German counter-attack.)

Heavy fighting was reported still progressing along the Libyan-Egyptian border area and in the vicinity of Port Capuzzo.

British authorities were elated by the news that the Duke of Aosta had accepted the British terms in reply to his offer to surrender Amba Alagi.

But it was not yet known whether the Fascist duke himself was among the estimated 7,000 Italians at Amba Alagi who now become prisoners in the hands of the British.

Previously military authorities in Cairo had stated the British would insist that the duke give himself up.

An earlier British communique announced destruction of at least 21 German planes and damaging bomb hits on 20 more in RAF combat operations that extended from Iraq down to Ethiopia and included Greece, Crete, the Suez Canal area and eastern Libya.

NICKEL SUPPLY EARMARKED FOR FEDERAL NEEDS

WASHINGTON, May 19—The Office of Production Management today issued a new order temporarily earmarking for National Defense virtually the entire supply of nickel in this country.

Under a previous order some nickel was allocated to civilian industries.

According to E. R. Stettinius Jr., priorities director of the OPM, the amount of nickel available this month will total 15,500,000 pounds, almost all of it imported from Canada. That amount will take care of defense demands, Stettinius said, but does not provide for filling a total of 5,500,000 pounds needed for civilians.

"Because of the shortage in nickel the new procedure does not include a schedule of preference ratings for civilian uses," the OPM order said. "However, some allocations can be and will be made for non-defense uses on a restricted basis, in so far as possible, in order to prevent serious dislocation in established manufacturing plants and to prevent sudden unemployment."

EGYPTIAN SHIP RAIDER VICTIM

201 Passengers, 120 Of Them Believed To Be U. S. Citizens, Among Missing; No Trace Found Of Neutral Craft

175 MISSIONARIES REPORTED ABOARD

Cairo Hints Steamer Sunk En Route From Jersey City To Cape Town

CAIRO, May 19—Fears that all 201 passengers, including 120 Americans, lost their lives when the neutral Egyptian liner Zamzam was sunk in the South Atlantic, possibly by a Nazi raider, spread rapidly in Cairo today. An official announcement revealed the 8,229-ton vessel was en route to Egypt from New York when she was sent to the bottom some time ago.

Since then, not a trace of any survivors has been found and no word regarding fate of the passengers has been received.

Egyptian owners of the vessel reported she was lost as a result of "enemy action."

One report, not yet officially confirmed in Cairo, said a surface raider operating in the South Atlantic sank the vessel.

The ship had left its pier at Jersey City March 20 and touched at Pernambuco, Brazil, April 10.

It had been due at Cape Town, South Africa, April 21, but since then nothing has been heard of the ship, until today's announcement that it was lost somewhere between Pernambuco and Cape Town.

(The British-American ambulance corps in New York said the vessel had been missing more than a week and was believed to have been the victim of a German raider.) (Authorities in London said that the Zamzam "must be presumed to have been lost."

Vehicles Also Lost (They declared the ship carried a full ambulance unit belonging to the Anglo-American Ambulance Corps, manned by 24 Americans. The unit consisted of more than 20 vehicles, a field kitchen and an X-ray trailer.

(The Americans were described as either doctors or nurse-drivers who also volunteered for service with the "Free French" forces in the middle east.

(In addition, 175 missionaries, both protestant and Catholic, were reported aboard the ship.) In recent months the Zamzam had carried many Americans home to the United States from the middle east.

Search Fails To Reveal Clues

NEW YORK, May 19—William V. C. Bruxton, president of the British American Ambulance Corps, today revealed that the insurance underwriters of the ill-fated Egyptian liner Zamzam, reported lost in the South Atlantic with 120 Americans aboard, had made a thorough effort to locate survivors without success.

Actor's Son Listed With Lost Corps

Philip Faversham One Of Volunteers Aboard Egyptian Ship

NEW YORK, May 19—Philip Faversham, 33-year-old actor son of the late English matinee idol William Faversham, today was listed as a passenger aboard the ill-fated Egyptian liner Zamzam, which was reported to have been sunk in the South Atlantic.

Faversham, who is well known in Hollywood and on Broadway, sailed on the Zamzam March 20 from Jersey City, N. J., for service in Africa with the British-American ambulance corps. Ambulance corps officials today disclosed that the ship has been missing for more than a week, and that it is believed to have been a victim of a German commerce raider.

According to corps officials, the following 23 persons, in addition to Faversham, sailed aboard the ill-fated liner under the co-leadership of Francis J. Vicovali, 29, of New York, and Captain William A. Wydenbruce-Loe, a veteran of the first World War.

COLUMBUS YOUTH, DRIVER OF DEATH CAR, PAROLED

Judge Meeker Terwilliger, Monday, granted a parole to Willard C. Thalgott, 24-year-old Columbus youth indicted by the April grand jury on charges of second degree manslaughter.

The Columbus youth, who crashed his car over a 15-foot embankment on the CCC highway near Harrisburg New Year's morning, bringing injuries which resulted in the death of his companion, Miss Leota Snyder, 25, Columbus nurse, has been free under $1,000 bond.

The parole was granted Monday after parents of Miss Snyder asked that the charges not be pressed. Charges were filed by State Highway Patrolman E. P. Wells. Terms of the parole provide that Thalgott violate no laws and that he refrain from the use of intoxicating liquors.

Duce's Duke In Ethiopia Surrenders

Aosta Turns Stronghold Of Amba Alagi Over To British Forces

ROME, May 19 — Surrender of Amba Alagi in Ethiopia to British forces was announced by the Italian high command today. The communique said the Duke of Aosta, Italian viceroy of Ethiopia, has been taken prisoner.

Italian troops at Amba Alagi capitulated after offering resistance which, the communique said, had been "prolonged to utmost" before they were forced to cease fighting. "In recognition of their bravery," the bulletin added, "our troops were allowed to keep their weapons."

CAIRO, May 19—British troops today entered the northern Ethiopian city of Amba Alagi — last major Fascist stronghold in Empire Haile Selassie's domain.

Victorious British forces marched into the city after the Duke of Aosta, Italian viceroy of Ethiopia, accepted terms of surrender stipulated by the British in negotiations which began on Friday.

Official announcement of the triumph at Amba Alagi was made in a communique which said the northwestern Egyptian town of Sollum still is in British hands.

(On Saturday the Germans claimed to have recaptured Sollum after conceding the previous day that it had been seized by the British. The Nazi communique on Saturday claimed the British had been driven out by a joint Italo-German counter-attack.)

Heavy fighting was reported still progressing along the Libyan-Egyptian border area and in the vicinity of Fort Capuzzo.

British authorities were elated by the news that the Duke of Aosta had accepted the British terms in reply to his offer to surrender Amba Alagi.

But it was not yet known whether the Fascist duke himself was among the estimated 7,000 Italians at Amba Alagi who now become prisoners in the hands of the British.

Previously military authorities in Cairo had stated the British would insist that the duke give himself up.

An earlier British communique announced destruction of at least 21 German planes and damaging bomb hits on 20 more in RAF combat operations that extended from Iraq down to Ethiopia and included Greece, Crete, the Suez Canal area and eastern Libya.

NICKEL SUPPLY EARMARKED FOR FEDERAL NEEDS

WASHINGTON, May 19—The Office of Production Management today issued a new order temporarily earmarking for National Defense virtually the entire supply of nickel in this country.

Under a previous order some nickel was allocated to civilian industries.

According to E. R. Stettinius Jr., priorities director of the OPM, the amount of nickel available this month will total 15,500,000 pounds, almost all of it imported from Canada. That amount will take care of defense demands, Stettinius said, but does not provide for filling a total of 5,500,000 pounds needed for civilians.

"Because of the shortage in nickel the new procedure does not include a schedule of preference ratings for civilian uses," the OPM order said. "However, some allocations can be and will be made for non-defense uses on a restricted basis, in so far as possible, in order to prevent serious dislocation in established manufacturing plants and to prevent sudden unemployment."

Cairo Hints Steamer Sunk En Route From Jersey City To Cape Town

CAIRO, May 19—Fears that all 201 passengers, including 120 Americans, lost their lives when the neutral Egyptian liner Zamzam was sunk in the South Atlantic, possibly by a Nazi raider, spread rapidly in Cairo today. An official announcement revealed the 8,229-ton vessel was en route to Egypt from New York when she was sent to the bottom some time ago.

Since then, not a trace of any survivors has been found and no word regarding fate of the passengers has been received.

Egyptian owners of the vessel reported she was lost as a result of "enemy action."

One report, not yet officially confirmed in Cairo, said a surface raider operating in the South Atlantic sank the vessel.

The ship had left its pier at Jersey City March 20 and touched at Pernambuco, Brazil, April 10.

It had been due at Cape Town, South Africa, April 21, but since then nothing has been heard of the ship, until today's announcement that it was lost somewhere between Pernambuco and Cape Town.

(The British-American ambulance corps in New York said the vessel had been missing more than a week and was believed to have been sunk in the South Atlantic.

Harry Weil, East High Street, said Monday that he is an acquaintance, through correspondence, of Mrs. Evans Clark of New York, mother of one of the youths lost on the Zamzam. Mrs. Clark, editor of the magazine Nation, is a leader in an effort to collect a Jewish relief fund.

According to corps officials, the following 23 persons, in addition to Faversham, sailed aboard the ill-fated liner under the co-leadership of Francis J. Vicovali, 29, of New York, and Captain William A. Wydenbruce-Lee, a veteran of the first World War.

GOTHAM MAYOR IN WASHINGTON; POST AWAITING?

NEW YORK, May 19 — Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia left by airplane today for Washington amid reports that he would be named to a position high in defense councils, possibly being nominated civil defense coordinator.

LaGuardia has been most active in aid of the administration since the defense program was formulated last year and has served as chairman of the joint American-Canadian Defense Commission.

Search Fails To Reveal Clues

NEW YORK, May 19—William V. C. Bruxton, president of the British American Ambulance Corps, today revealed that the insurance underwriters of the ill-fated Egyptian liner Zamzam, reported lost in the South Atlantic with 120 Americans aboard, had made a thorough effort to locate survivors without success. "This is a terrible blow," Bruxton, who heads the volunteer drivers organization, which had 24 of its members aboard the ship, (Continued on Page Two)

Griffith Says Councilmen May Pass New Measure As Emergency

SOME OPPOSITION HEARD

Retail Chairman Declares Parking Problem May Be Solved

As councilmen were considering the parallel-meter parking system which will be placed before them in the form of a city ordinance Wednesday night, advocates of the system were expressing confidence Monday that the parking ordinance would be passed as an emergency measure.

The meter parking plan has been growing in popularity ever since it was proposed to council by the merchants last Wednesday night, those recommending the system claim, and they report unofficially that they are assured of the support of the majority of council.

George Griffith, chairman of the Retail Merchants Division of the Chamber of Commerce, reports, "Since our meeting with council last Wednesday night, I am surprised to see the number of persons who are swinging to the support of the system."

Those opposing meter parking maintain that it will drive the farm trade from the city, and that farmers who naturally would trade in Circleville would go to neighboring cities where they do not have to pay to park.

Traffic officers working Main and Court street traffic Saturday night said that despite double-parkers they were able to keep traffic from jamming in the downtown section. They issued no tickets for double parking or for overtime parking.

The meter system will provide motorists 12 minutes parking for one cent, 24 minutes for two cents, one hour for five cents and two hours for ten cents. Double parking on Main or Court Street will not be permitted under the new system.

Should council declare the parking ordinance an emergency measure, it may suspend the rules and pass it at Wednesday night's meeting. Such passage would mean that the measure would go into effect after thirty days. Ordinances not declared as emergency issues must be read three times at three different council meetings before a vote can be taken.

LONDON, May 19—Reports that the wife of Rudolf Hess has been arrested in Germany as a sequel to his strange flight from the Reich to Scotland reached London today.

Seizure of the former Nazi chieftain's wife along with other prominent citizens was reported in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch for Gothenburg, Sweden.

The Berlin correspondent of the Gothenburg Posten, according to Exchange, said that Frau Ilse Hess had been taken into custody about two days ago and that "many others" have been arrested. Those held in Berlin, the report went on "amount in the hundreds."

The Swedish dispatch, as quoted by Exchange, went on to say that German police are "arresting anybody in restaurants or other public places who discuss the Hess affair."

(Editor's Note: The Berlin radio said reports about alleged threats to the safety of Hess' family were British propaganda.)
The Swedish correspondent's story said that the German plane designer, Willy Messerschmitt, had been questioned about the brand new plane in which Hess took off from Augsburg, Bavaria, for his flight to Scotland.

SHEEP KILLING Shortages in Various Fields Bring Instructions from Draft Officials

Rifle Reports Many Dogs Running Loose; Claims To Be Higher

The worst wave of sheep killing ever to strike the county has destroyed over 50 head of sheep in the last two weeks, County Dog Warden Harry Riffle said Monday.

"Sheep killing is the worst it ever has been, most of the damage being done by dogs without licenses," the dog warden said. Farmers in Jackson, Washington and Wayne townships are bearing the brunt of the damage. Dogs attack the sheep at night in barnyards or in pastures and have killed as high as 20 in one flock. Others are injured and permanently crippled in the night raids.

Dogs running loose without licenses are being picked up and their owners arrested and fined in an effort to check the raids on farmers' flocks. Although so far this month only two persons have been cited before Justice of Peace B. T. Hedges, fined $2 and costs and made to purchase dog licenses, many more may be arrested within the next few days unless they buy dog tags, Mr. Riffle warned.

Sheep claims for the month are expected to be considerably higher than previously and commissioners are wondering how long their funds for claims will hold out. Individual claims last month ran as high as $100. Several are expected to go over that in May.

Shortages in Various Fields Bring Instructions from Draft Officials

Ohio State Selective Service Headquarters, Monday, asked the 330 boards in the State to make certain that no man, who is more useful for National Defense in his civilian occupation, is called for military training.

The need for this careful selection was stressed and attention called to the recent announcement by National Headquarters, Selective Service System, that the Office of Production Management and other National Defense agencies report growing shortages, not only of skilled mechanics, but also in vital professions. Local boards were cautioned against calling men needed in factory or field, and concerning the necessity of maintaining an adequate reservoir of professional and technical specialists, by permitting promising students to complete professional training.

"While the recruitment of a large peacetime Army is essential to National Defense," Lieut. Col. C. W. Goble, state director, said, "it is equally important that there be no interference with the production of defense supplies and material. We must arm, feed and clothe the military forces of democracy and we must also maintain the morale of the civilian population by protecting public health and general welfare. To do so, we must make careful and intelligent investigation of every registrant to be sure, in each case, that a call to military training will not interfere with equally important civilian work for national defense."

Three Objectives

Selective Service Regulations with respect to occupational deferments, the Director declared, have the purpose of guiding local boards to three major results:

(1) Prevention of avoidable shortages of necessary workers in the Nation's program for defense production;

(2) Protection of the national industrial training program by deferment of individuals when there is evidence that they are "in training or preparation" for an occupation or employment necessary to the maintenance of "national health, safety, or interest," and

(3) Anticipation of possible exhaustion of pools of highly skilled workers not now employed in defense activities but probably necessary in the near future for expansion of defense production, when such men "but for a seasonal or temporary interruption would be engaged in such defense activity."

Intelligent deferment of registrants must also include students in certain specialized professional and technical fields according to the Director. He pointed out that recent studies made by the Office of Production Management have shown the supply of manpower is either "dangerously low," or there are indications of shortage in the near future in seventeen professional and technical fields.

The eight in which the more critical situation exists are civil engineering, electrical engineering, chemical engineering, mining and metallurgical engineering, mechanical engineering, chemistry, medicine and dentistry. The other nine are agricultural engineering, sanitary engineering, pharmacy, physics, biology and bacteriology, and four branches of geology (geophysics, meteorology, hydrology, and cartography.)

Students in these fields should be deferred, the director said, "so long as they continue to be necessary men in preparation or training for activities necessary to national interest." Such deferments, he emphasized, must be made individually under the "necessary man" provisions of Selective Service Regulations and should include students who have been deferred until July 1st, as well as those still to be classified.

SLAVE LABOR

INCREDIBLE as it would have seemed before the present war, it looks as if Hitler and his Nazis are deliberately planning to establish a vast slave system in which the rest of the world will work for Germany. Robert Ley, Nazi Labor Front leader, comes right out with it, flaunting his prophecy in the face of Americans.

"This the Yankees can certainly believe," he says. "We will certainly so organize the part of Europe that we rule that in one or two or at least three years, it will be working at full speed—working for Germany."

"Then 300,000,000 Europeans of our continent, with the powerful and inexhaustible resources of their economy and work, will face 130,000,000 Americans in the United States and 40,000,000 Englishmen in ruined and defeated England. Then we will see whether the Anglo-Saxons will overcome the lead of the Germans."

Hitler has already made a good start in establishing his slave system, particularly in Poland. He loots the labor of the countries he overruns as he does their material wealth and industry.

TRICKING THE DANDELIONS

THERE is much to be said for the annual "Save the Dandelion" campaign sponsored by the Detroit News. For one thing, it introduces a light note among the disturbing problems of war, mystery, taxes and what not, which, though apparently varied, nevertheless have a monotonous persistence. For another, it promptly takes the thoughts outdoors to green lawns and grassy meadows, alike bright with adaptable dandelions, long-stemmed or short, large and lush or small and flat, as local conditions determine.

The average householder may say with some asperity that the dandelion doesn't need saving. "Try to get rid of the pesky thing!" Well, that's just what the News is really attempting. It argues that all the varied efforts of man to conquer the dandelion have failed. It suggests that a period of coddling might so alter the dandelion's temperament and habits that it would begin to curtail its seed output and grow choosy about the soil and climatic conditions under which it would thrive. Then first thing the makers of lawns knew, the dandelion would be gone.

It is difficult to recall an instance when a pest—horticultural, political, or otherwise—has been overcome in this way. But

STREAMLINED AMERICA

WASHINGTON—In front of the White House these days a group of about ten women pace back and forth, back and forth. They look a little bedraggled, a bit weary. Over their shoulders are signs which identify them as part of the "perpetual vigil" being staged by the American Peace Mobilization.

These women may not know it, but they are only a small cog in a tremendous propaganda machine. Behind them and behind other phases of the streamlined lobby now bearing down on Washington is one of the most adroitly maneuvered campaigns the Capital has seen in years. The lobby against the Holding Company Act was peanuts in comparison.

Origin of the campaign was a secret meeting of the inner command of the America First Committee, spark-plug of the entire isolationist movement.

At this meeting, America First leaders reported that Roosevelt was hesitating about convoys because of the uncertainty of public sentiment. So they decided that the best way to keep him from acting was to pound him with a barrage of hostile demonstrations. Mass meetings, street rallies, picket lines, newspaper advertisements, and especially the mail were to be mobilized for the attack.

To carry on the campaign large donations were solicited, or volunteered from various big industrialist, most of them from around Chicago—also from other sources. The Committee is not required to file its finances with Congress, so the extent of the contributions may never be known. But $100,000 was to be spent on newspaper advertisements alone.

Opening gun of this carefully planned drive was Lindbergh's speech in Madison Square Garden. Later came Herbert Hoover's anti-convoy broadcast. There will be more.

UNCLE SAM'S MAIL

But the chief pressure weapon decided upon was mail—aimed not at Congress but directly at the White House. The isolationists wisely concluded that the question of convoys would not be decided by Congress, but by the President. So he became the chief target of their fire.

Thus all the speeches, rallies, picket lines, etc., are the ballyhoo for the mail drive. And they are producing results. The White House has said nothing about it, but mail has jumped to huge proportions in recent weeks. Truck-loads are dumped at the Executive Offices daily—most of the letters arriving by convoys.

As a by-product, a lot of this mail has been going to Congress, and the services of various good ladies have been enlisted to help answer it. The offices of Senators Wheeler, McCarran, Clark, Nye and other isolationists are a beehive of busy workers.

Find Frequency of Multiple Births in Ratio

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

● Those of my readers who have followed my column for any length of time are aware of my interest in multiple human births. I feel that in the case of twins we have a unique opportunity to study organisms biologically because in the case of similar (one-egg) twins, we have individuals starting out with exactly the same heredity and the same biological or life impetus. My records show, indeed, that in spite of varying environments, twins, over and over again, live the same length of time, even to within hours and minutes of each other, and often die of the same diseases.

Dr. Clending will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

I am very much interested, therefore, in the recent book by Dr. H. H. Newman, Professor of Zoology at the University of Chicago, on Multiple Human Births. (Doubleday, Doran & Company, Inc., 1940). Dr. Newman has frequently studied twins but this, so far as I know, is the first time that he has branched out into triplets, quadruplets and a study of the famous quintuplets.

Frequency of Multiple Births

The frequency of multiple births follows a startling mathematical ratio. Triplets are as much scarcer than twins as twins are scarcer than singletons. In other words, a twin birth occurs for each of 86 single births, and one triplet birth occurs for each of 86 twin births, and one quadruplet birth occurs for each 86 triplet births. Stated otherwise, the ratio of twins to single births is 1 to 86; that of triplets to single births is 1 to 86²; that of quadruplets to single births is 1 to 86³. This astonishing ratio has been worked out accurately and is known as Hellin's Law.

Two out of 86, or 1 out of 44 babies born are twins, according to these figures. "Does this mean," asks Professor Newman, "that if you were to attend a football game viewed by 44,000 spectators, that 1,000 of them would be twins?" Well, perhaps not quite that, but we should expect about 600 twins in a crowd of that size.

In four California cities—Berkeley, Oakland, Richmond and Alameda—there was a total school enrollment of 75,013. Of these 1,051 were twins.

Sex Ratios

In multiple births, the zoologist tries to determine whether the individuals came from one egg, or two or three eggs. One-egg twins, triplets or quadruplets are always of the same sex (a brother and sister twin are never one-egg twins) and they are similar in many other respects.

Now, looking at the sex ratios of quadruplets there were 48 sets of quadruplets born in the United States from 1915 to 1930. There could be five, and only five, sex combinations in a quadruplet set: (1) 4 males, (2) 3 males and 1 female, (3) 2 males and 2 females, (4) 3 females and 1 male, and (5) 4 females. As a matter of fact, in the 48 sets, there were 13 all males and 10 all females, 12 two males and two females. This would indicate that nearly half were one-egg quadruplets and a fourth were two-egg quadruplets. Four sets of quintuplets have been born in the United States since 1776—one in 1776, one in 1800, one in 1896 (Maysfield, Ky.—all boys) and one in 1936 (Durham, N. C.—all girls).

Not as much study has been made of the psychology of triplets and quadruplets as of twins, but in the case of one-egg triplets or quadruplets, the similarity in personality, intellect, bodily build and tendency to disease, is just the same as in twins.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
R. T. J.—"What will cause the heart to miss a beat, especially when sleeping on the left side or bending over?"
Answer—These are called extrasystoles and are the commonest cause of irregularity of the heart or palpitation in those past middle life. They are probably not of any serious significance. The usual explanation is that they are due to irritability of the heart muscle either from the use of tobacco, alcohol, or some other cause. As a proof of this, they go away after a round of stiff exercise which tires the heart muscle.

Honeymoon Gold

by PEGGY DERN
RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER FORTY-THREE

"ONCE," SAID Betsy cheerfully, as she served Tom with more hot coffee and pushed the toast-rack closer to his plate. "I read in a book about George Washington that he wrote in his diary, 'This night Mrs. Washington and I did something I dare say we have not done in 20 years—sat down to dinner alone.' I know exactly how he felt."

Tom grinned at her. "The honeymooners DO get in one's hair a bit, don't they?" he admitted companionably.

"And under foot no end," answered Betsy. "Would you think me a low, dirty so-and-so if I admitted that I wouldn't mind if tomorrow was the end of the month?"

"And they'd be going?" said Tom. "I don't like to upset you, my treasure—but had you stopped to realize that we'll no more than see the last of the present crop until another will loom up on the horizon?"

"It's pretty discouraging, in a way," Betsy admitted. "Do you suppose we'd be violating the will if we took a few days off in between visitations?"

"Something you'd like to do?" suggested Tom politely.

"Yes," said Betsy. "I'd like a chance to play around with you—just the two of us. We had fun before they came, didn't we?"

She caught her breath almost before the words were said. Her color deepened and her eyes looked up at him defiantly, tilting her chin at an angle that dared him to laugh at her. "Oh, I'm not making a pass at you," she assured him hastily. "I'm still in love with somebody else, and I still remember that I'm not your type. It's just that—well, you ARE fun, and we did have good times together. And—well, darn it, I like you!"

Tom bowed. There was a twinkle in his eye, but he was quite grave as he answered, "That's swell—because I like you, too. You're a swell little pal, and a week or two of being alone would give me a chance to really teach you to fish and to swim. We'll stave off the next invasion for a while."

"Thanks," said Betsy happily.

"For what?" asked Tom, puzzled.

"For understanding that I wasn't trying to get you to—get all sappy about me," answered Betsy frankly. "Last night when Terry McKay just about snapped your head off in the kitchen for asking about supper, and I barked at her, I was afraid you'd—well, go getting ideas, or—something."

"Don't worry. I never get ideas—not that sort of ideas, anyway." It was a curious thing that instead of looking pleased and relieved at such assurance, she looked a little dashed, as though she had hoped for an entirely different answer. But as he helped her clear the table and wash the dishes, she chattered determinedly about other things.

They had just finished when they heard the sound of a speedboat. "Too early for the mail and supply boat," said Tom, frowning a little. "Now, what do you suppose has happened?"

"I wouldn't know, but we could go find out," suggested Betsy, leading the way down the path to the pier.

As the boat came in and tied up at the pier, a man jumped ashore and Tom said, in a tone of real pleasure, "Why, it's Hugh Powell! He must have some news about Blake."

Hugh greeted them warmly and said at once, "I knew you'd want to hear the news. We've got Blake—and with the goods on him. He'll be under lock and key for a good many years."

"Good work!" said Tom. "How did it happen?"

"Well, it started with your tip," returned Hugh. "Frankly, we'd never have suspected him—or probably not for quite a while—if you hadn't admitted your suspicions of him. After that, we kept a sharp eye on him. Sure enough, he stuck his neck out—and we got him! He was loaded to the gills with oil and manganese leases scattered all over South and Central America. We knew no man with Blake's capital could handle all of that. And we moved in on him. He was all set to be dictator of the United States, 'come the revolution' he and his crowd are so fond of discussing and foretelling."

"The man must be crazy," exploded Tom.

"Sure. Most of his kind are. But crazy men can be pretty dangerous," admitted Hugh. "Of course, his plans couldn't have worked out successfully—but in squeezing him and his crowd, a lot of regular guys might have been hurt. Well, he'll be the guest of the government for a good many years to come—so you can put your mind at rest about his designs on Halcyon Island."

"When he didn't make any further effort to take over the island after the shipwreck business. I knew he was pretty slick and that you were going to have trouble getting him," said Tom. "It must have been a pretty tough job."

Hugh grinned. "Oh, well, my department thrives on tough jobs," he said cheerfully. "No, thanks. I can't stop. I've got a bunch of work waiting. I just wanted to be sure you were among the first to know of Blake's downfall."

"Sure you can't stay for lunch?" begged Betsy.

"Sorry," said Hugh, grinning down at her. "But I'm thinking seriously of throwing myself on your hospitality before too long—for the purpose for which Halcyon Island was intended. In other words, may I spend my honeymoon here?"

"If you don't, we'll sue you," Betsy promised him darkly. He laughed, shook hands, and a moment later his speedboat was bobbing away across the water.

"Was that the mail?" Mrs. Edmonds said gaily behind them.

"Oh, good morning," said Betsy. "No, that was Mr. Powell. He came to tell us that the men who threatened us—the shipwreck crowd, you know—have been arrested."

"Oh, that's a relief," said Mrs. Edmonds, and turned to her husband who was approaching. "Oh, Willie, they've arrested the spies who were trying to make use of the island. Isn't that wonderful?"

"No more than I expected," said the major, vigorously. "I knew Powell's department wouldn't fail. It seldom does."

"Do my eyes deceive me?" murmured Mrs. Edmonds. Her attention was caught by the sight of Brooks and Natalie approaching, hand in hand, looking into each other's eyes with the unmistakable light of love for all the world to see. "My dear, can this be true? They've been in daggers' points for days."

Betsy looked up at Tom, met his eyes, and murmured for his ears alone, "See what I mean?"

Sex Ratios

In multiple births, the zoologist tries to determine whether the individuals came from one egg, or two or three eggs. One-egg twins, triplets or quadruplets are always of the same sex (a brother and sister twin are never one-egg twins) and they are similar in many other respects.

Now, looking at the sex ratios of quadruplets there were 48 sets of quadruplets born in the United States from 1915 to 1930. There could be five, and only five, sex combinations in a quadruplet set:

(1) 4 males, (2) 3 males and 1 female, (3) 2 males and 2 females, (4) 3 females and 1 male, and (5) 4 females. As a matter of fact, in the 48 sets, there were 13 all males and 10 all females, 12 two males and two females. This would indicate that nearly half were one-egg quadruplets and a fourth were two-egg quadruplets. Four sets of quintuplets have been born in the United States since 1776—one in 1776, one in 1800, one in 1896 (Maysfield, Ky.—all boys) and one in 1936 (Durham, N. C.—all girls).

Not as much study has been made of the psychology of triplets and quadruplets as of twins, but in the case of one-egg triplets or quadruplets, the similarity in personality, intellect, bodily build and tendency to disease, is just the same as in twins.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

R. T. J.: "What will cause the heart to miss a beat, especially when sleeping on the left side or bending over?"

Answer—These are called extra systoles and are the commonest cause of irregularity of the heart or palpitation in those past middle life. They are probably not of any serious significance. The usual explanation is that they are due to irritability of the heart muscle either from the use of tobacco, alcohol, or some other cause. As a proof of this, they go away after a round of stiff exercise which tires the heart muscle.

CHAPTER FORTY-THREE

"ONCE," SAID Betsy cheerfully, as she served Tom with more hot coffee and pushed the toast-rack closer to his plate. "I read in a book about George Washington that he wrote in his diary, 'This night Mrs. Washington and I did something I dare say we have not done in 20 years—sat down to dinner alone.' I know exactly how he felt."

Tom grinned at her. "The honeymooners DO get in one's hair a bit, don't they?" he admitted companionably.

"And under foot no end," answered Betsy. "Would you think me a low, dirty so-and-so if I admitted that I wouldn't mind if tomorrow was the end of the month?"

"And they'd be going?" said Tom. "I don't like to upset you, my treasure—but had you stopped to realize that we'll no more than see the last of the present crop until another will 'loom up on the horizon'?"

"It's pretty discouraging, in a way," Betsy admitted. "Do you suppose we'd be violating the will if we took a few days off in between visitations?"

"Something you'd like to do?" suggested Tom politely.

"Yes," said Betsy. "I'd like a chance to play around with you—just the two of us. We had fun before they came, didn't we?"

She caught her breath almost before the words were said. Her color deepened and her eyes would not quite meet his. Her hands shook a little as she moved the silver beside her plate, and then she looked up at him defiantly, tilting her chin at her. "Oh, I'm not making a pass at you," she assured him hastily. "I'm still in love with somebody else, and I still remember that I'm not your type. It's just that—I, you ARE fun, and we did have good times together. And—well, darn it, I like you!"

Tom bowed. There was a twinkle in his eye, but he was quite grave as he answered, "That's swell—because I like you, too. You're a swell little pal, and a week or two of being alone would give me a chance to really teach you to fish and to swim. We'll stave off the next invasion for a while."

"Thanks," said Betsy happily. "For what?" asked Tom, puzzled.

"For understanding that I wasn't trying to get you to—to get all sappy about me," answered Betsy frankly. "Last night when Terry McKay just about snapped your head off in the kitchen for asking about supper, and I barked at her, I was afraid you'd—well, go getting ideas, or—something."

"Don't worry. I never get ideas—not that sort of ideas, anyway." It was a curious thing that instead of looking pleased and relieved at such assurance, she looked a little dashed, as though she had hoped for an entirely different answer. But as he helped her clear the table and wash the dishes, she chattered determinedly about other things.

They had just finished when they heard the sound of a speedboat. "Too early for the mail and supply boat," said Tom, frowning a little. "Now, what do you suppose has happened?"

"I wouldn't know, but we could go find out," suggested Betsy, leading the way down the path to the pier.

As the boat came in and tied up at the pier, a man jumped ashore and Tom said, in a tone of real pleasure, "Why, it's Hugh Powell! He must have some news about Blake."

Hugh greeted them warmly and said at once, "I knew you'd want to hear the news. We've got Blake—and with the goods on him. He'll be under lock and key for a good many years."

"Good work!" said Tom. "How did it happen?"

"Well, it started with your tip," returned Hugh. "Frankly, we'd never have suspected him—or probably not for quite a while—if you hadn't admitted your suspicions of him. After that, we kept a sharp eye on him. Sure enough, he stuck his neck out—and we got him! He was loaded to the gills with oil and manganese leaves scattered all over South and Central America. We knew no man with Blake's capital could handle all of that. And we moved in on him. He was all set to be dictator of the United States, 'come the revolution' he and his crowd are so fond of discussing and foreshadowing."

"The man must be crazy," exploded Tom. "Sure. Most of his kind are. But crazy men can be pretty dangerous," admitted Hugh. "Of course, his plans couldn't have worked out successfully—but in squeezing him and his crowd, a lot of regular guys might have been hurt. Well, he'll be the guest of the government for a good many years to come—so you can put your mind at rest about his designs on Halcyon Island."

"When he didn't make any further effort to take over the island after the shipwreck business, I knew he was pretty slick and that you were going to have trouble getting him," said Tom. "It must have been a pretty tough job."

Hugh grinned. "Oh, well, my department thrives on tough jobs," he said cheerfully. "No, thanks, I can't stop. I've got a bunch of work waiting. I just wanted to be sure you were among the first to know of Blake's downfall."

"Sure you can't stay for lunch?" begged Betsy.

"Sorry," said Hugh, grinning down at her. "But I'm thinking seriously of throwing myself on your hospitality before too long—for the purpose for which Halcyon Island was intended. In other words, may I spend my honeymoon here?"

"If you don't, we'll sue you," Betsy promised him drolly. He laughed, shook hands, and a moment later his speedboat was bobbing away across the water.

"Was that the mail?" Mrs. Edmonds said gaily behind them. "Oh, good morning," said Betsy. "No, that was Mr. Powell. He came to tell us that the men who threatened us—the shipwreck crowd, you know—have been arrested."

"Oh, that's a relief," said Mrs. Edmonds, and turned to her husband who was approaching. "Oh, Willie, they've arrested the spies who were trying to make use of the island. Isn't that wonderful?"

"No more than I expected," said the major, vigorously. "I knew Powell's department wouldn't fail. It seldom does."

"Do my eyes deceive me?" murmured Mrs. Edmonds. Her attention was caught by the sight of Brooks and Natalie approaching, hand in hand, looking into each other's eyes with the unmistakable light of love for all the world to see. "My dear, can this be true? They've been at daggers' points for days."

Betsy looked up at Tom, met his eyes, and murmured for his ears alone, "See what I mean?"

Doris Moffitt Is Bride Of James Reichelderfer

Vows Exchanged Before Mantle In Home

Simplicity marked the informal home wedding when Miss Doris Moffitt and Mr. James Reichelderfer exchanged their nuptial vows Saturday. The single ring service of the Methodist Church was read at 4:30 p. m. by the Rev. Nell Peterson, the ceremony being performed before the mantle in the living room at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Moffitt, 336 East Franklin Street, parents of the bride.

The mantles had twin arrangements of pink and blue cornflowers at either end, and feathery green vines extending to a large basket of blue iris and pink gladioli which centered the decorations of the improvised altar. Tall crystal vases of iris and gladioli in the same shades together with burning white tapers in five branched cathedral candelabra guarded the approach on either side.

Miss Abbe Mills Clarke played lovely wedding music preceding and during the service, and the Lohengrin Wedding March as the bride party came to the altar. Miss Moffitt was given in marriage by her father.

The bride chose a lovely frock of white morganza over white taffeta for her wedding. The bodice, softly draped above a wide closely fitting self girdle, had short puff sleeves and square neckline outlined with fine tucks and lace insertion. The long full skirt with knee-length ruffle, had for its accent several rows of lace insertion alternating with fine tucking.

A half-wreath of waxed orange blossoms held the double veil of bridal illusion to her head. A diamond centered crystal pendant on a slender chain, the gift of the bridegroom, was the bride's only jewelry. White sweet peas and swans around a cluster of pale pink roses centered with a sprig of blue forget-me-nots made up her colonial bouquet.

Miss Ruth Moffitt served as bridesmaid for her sister, her floor-length frock of pale pink organza having a sweetheart neckline and short puff sleeves. The taffeta slip of matching pink had several rows of blue ribbon with flat appliques of tiny flowers at the front, continuing the theme of blue and pink used throughout the wedding. Her colonial bouquet of pink rose buds had a center of blue larkspur, and was tied with blue ribbon.

Mr. Horace Gilmore of Ann Arbor, Mich., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gilmore of South Court Street, was best man for Mr. Reichelderfer.

A small reception for the bride party and a few close friends and relatives immediately followed the service. Mrs. Moffitt in dove blue with a corsage of pink sweet peas, and Mrs. Ione Reichelderfer, mother of the bridegroom, in dusty pink with a corsage of pink and white sweet peas, received. Miss Clarke's gown of rose pink was complemented with white sweet peas.

A large three-tiered wedding cake topped with miniature bride and bridegroom centered the lace covered tea table where a buffet lunch was served. Tall white tapers in crystal holders and blue and pink cornflowers in artistic arrangements were at either end of the table. After the bride cut the first slice of her cake for the bridegroom, the cake was cut and served with the lunch.

The former Miss Moffitt has been employed in the office of Hummel and Plum since her graduation from Circleville High School. She plans to continue her work.

Mr. Reichelderfer, son of Mrs. Ione Reichelderfer of 131 East Union Street and Mr. Evan W. Reichelderfer of Indianapolis, Ind., is a bookkeeper for the Third National Bank. He and his bride will reside at the East Union Street address.

Miss Jean Ferguson of Watt Street entertained at a dinner-bridge shower Saturday at the home of her parents in Harrison Township as a prenuptial courtesy. Miss Bernice Emrick of Jackson and Dayton, Ohio, Miss Emrick will become the bride of Mr. Clark Abbott of Flint, Mich., June 1 at Dayton.

Doris Moffitt Is Bride
Of James Reichelderfer

Vows Exchanged
Before Mantle
In Home

Simplicity marked the informal home wedding when Miss Doris Moffitt and Mr. James Reichelderfer exchanged their nuptial vows Saturday. The single ring service of the Methodist Church was read at 4:30 p. m. by the Rev. Neil Peterson, the ceremony being performed before the mantle in the living room at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Moffitt, 336 East Franklin Street, parents of the bride.

The mantles had twin arrangements of pink and blue cornflowers at either end, and feathery green vines extending to a large basket of blue iris and pink gladioli which centered the decorations of the improvised altar. Tall crystal vases of iris and gladioli in the same shades together with burning white tapers in five branched cathedral candelabra guarded the approach on either side.

Miss Abbe Mills Clarke played lovely wedding music preceding and during the service, and the Lohengrin Wedding March as the bridal party came to the altar. Miss Moffitt was given in marriage by her father.

The bride chose a lovely frock of white marganya over white taffeta for her wedding. The bodice, softly draped above a wide closely fitting self girdle, had short puff sleeves and square neckline outlined with fine tucks and lace insertion. The full skirt with knee-length ruffle, had for its accent several rows of lace insertion alternating with fine tucking.

A half-wreath of waxed orange blossoms held the double veil of bridal illusion to her head. A diamond centered crystal pendant on a slender chain, the gift of the bridegroom, was the bride's only jewelry. White sweet peas and swanses around a cluster of pale pink rose buds centered with a sprig of blue forget-me-nots made up her colonial bouquet.

Miss Ruth Moffitt served as bridesmaid for her sister, her floor-length frock of pale pink organza having a sweetheart neckline and short puff sleeves. The taffeta slip of matching pink had several rows of blue ribbon with flat appliques of tiny flowers at the front, continuing the theme of blue and pink used throughout the wedding. Her colonial bouquet of pink rose buds had a center of blue larkspur, and was tied with blue ribbon.

Mr. Horace Gilmore of Ann Arbor, Mich., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gilmore of South Court Street, was best man for Mr. Reichelderfer.

A small reception for the bridal party and a few close friends and relatives immediately followed the service. Mrs. Moffitt in dove blue with a corsage of pink sweet peas, and Mrs. Ione Reichelderfer, mother of the bridegroom, in dusty pink with a corsage of pink and white sweet peas, received.

Miss Clarke's gown of rose pink was complemented with white sweet peas.

A large three-tiered wedding cake topped with miniature bride and bridegroom centered the lace covered table where a buffet lunch was served. Tall white tapers in crystal holders and blue and pink cornflowers in artistic arrangements were at either end of the table. After the bride cut the first slice of her cake for the bridegroom, the cake was cut and served with the lunch.

The former Miss Moffitt has been employed in the office of Hummel and Plum since her graduation from Circleville High School. She plans to continue her work.

Mr. Reichelderfer, son of Mrs. Ione Reichelderfer of 131 East Union Street and Mr. Evan W. Reichelderfer of Indianapolis, Ind., is a bookkeeper for the Third National Bank. He and his bride will reside at the East Union Street address.

SCALZO FAVORED

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 19—Pete Scalzo, NBA featherweight champion from New York, ruled a 2 to 1 favorite to successfully defend his crown tonight against Phil Zwick of Kaukauna, Wis., in a 15-round bout in Milwaukee auditorium. The youthful champ was conceded an edge on the 35-year-old challenger in speed and general class, but backers of the local boy had hopes he might score an upset by tagging Scalzo with his powerful right.

REDLEGS MOVE UP SINGLE PEG BY 4-3 VICTORY.

Derringer Too Tough For Boston; Vander Meer Booked Monday

CINCINNATI, May 19 — The world champion Cincinnati Reds, who are way ahead of Philadelphia at least in the National League pennant chase, today boasted a winning streak of one full game.

The Reds broke a six-game losing streak, their longest since back in 1938, when they defeated Boston, 4 to 3. More than 10,500 loyal burghers rubbed their eyes in amazement as the punchless Reds actually slammed out 11 bingles, even though they wasted most of them.

But the four runs they counted proved enough for Big Paul Derringer, who limited the Braves to seven safeties and fanned nine. The win enabled the McKechnie-men to climb from seventh to sixth place, although they remain 10 games behind Brooklyn, only percentage points ahead of Pittsburgh, and only 2½ games ahead of Philadelphia, who hold the 99-year lease on the basement.

Johnny Vander Meer, who has been doing all right this season, along with most other Red hurlers, from an earned-run standpoint, goes to the mound this afternoon, praying that his teammates' bats will save him from a Brave scalping. Salvo will be the big gun for Boston.

While the Reds finally broke a six-game losing streak, the Dodgers dropped one by 7 to 4 to the Chicago Cubs and the Cardinals slammed their way to a neat win over the Philadelphia Phillies, 6 to 5.

Wyatt Defeated

The Dodgers and Whitlow Wyatt went down together against the Cubs, the defeat being only the second of the year for Wyatt, who had won seven straight, and the Cards scored their triumph with a dramatic flourish.

The sacks were loaded when Johnny Mize slapped out a single in the last half of the ninth to bring home the winning margin.

This blow served further to point out the kind of hitting the Cards are getting. Mize, Slaughter, Moore, Brown and Marion all are hitting hard and regularly, and Mancuso isn't exactly an anchor while he is in the game to do the receiving.

The remaining Sabbath National League contest went to the Giants over the Pittsburgh Pirates, 5 to 4, highlight of this encounter being Bill McGee's first start as a Giant. He was belted out in the second inning.

The Chicago White Sox, Detroit Tigers and New York Yankees all gained a full game on the leading Cleveland Indians in the American League, but all of them also remained well off the pace the Indians have been setting. The Tribe's defeat of yesterday amounted to outright humiliation. The Philadelphia Athletics did it by 10 to 3.

BUD BAER SAYS HE'LL FLATTEN BROWN BOMBER

WASHINGTON, May 19—Buddy Baer today predicted that he will win the world's heavyweight title Friday night by a knockout over Champion Joe Louis.

Angered over remarks by several critics that he doesn't get mad enough during his sparring sessions, Baer said:

"What do they expect me to do—go out and break up my hands murdering a couple of good sparring partners? Listen, I was plenty mad out there today, but I'm saving my wrath for Louis. I'm there to knock that guy flat. There's no use of my trying to take it out on my sparring partners. Tunney didn't have to, and neither am I."

Afraid of overtraining, Baer took the day off from his nearby Olney, Md., camp. Louis, however, scheduled a heavy session with his sparmates. The champ yesterday drew his biggest training camp crowd in history when 6,500 fans jammed Riverside Stadium to see him work out.

Three Injured As Auto Crashes Rounding Curve

Young People Taken To Hospital After Mishap On Scioto Trail

Three persons were sent to Berger Hospital early Sunday when the car in which they were riding skidded out of control and overturned on Route 23 three miles north of Circleville.

The injured were Lewis Conkel, 18, Mingo Street, who suffered a left hip injury; Miss Margaret Nance, 17, Ashville, hand and neck injuries, and Miss Betty Myers, 16, Ashville, a right arm fracture. Driver of the car, Vince Reed, 18, 677 East Mound Street, was not injured.

Conkel told Deputy Sheriff Bryan Custer, who investigated the accident, that his automobile had run out of gas as he was coming into Circleville and he had walked back to Valley View to get some fuel. He was returning to his car when he was picked up by Reed. Conkel was riding in the back seat of the car and Miss Nance and Miss Myers in front with Reed when the accident happened.

Car Misses Curve
No other cars were in the vicinity at the time of the accident and Deputy Custer said that Reed apparently had lost control of the automobile when it rounded the curve. The front end of the car was damaged as it nosed over in the road and came to rest on its side.

Bernard Matz, Stoutsville Route 1; Robert Trone, Ashville Route 1, and Robert Liston, Circleville Route 1, came by shortly after the accident, lifted the car back on its wheels and took Conkel and the two girls to the hospital.

Conkel and Miss Myers were released after treatment. Miss Nance was held until later Sunday morning. The accident happened about 2 a. m.

Drunken driving sent two motorists to police headquarters over the week end. Mahlon J. Immel, 25, of Yellowbud, was arrested at 3:50 a. m. Sunday on North Court Street. He was held in City Jail until later in the day when his $115 bond was furnished and he was released.

Ernest Daniel Woodfork, Bloomingsburg, was arrested about 3:10 a. m. Sunday on South Court Street and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol. He is in City Jail pending hearing before the mayor.

Patrolmen George Green and Elmer Merriam made the arrests.

Trucker Fined $100, Costs

Robert C. Pence, 29, Columbus, arrested Saturday on South Washington Street by Patrolman Alva Shasteen for driving when under the influence of alcohol, was released after his $115 bond was furnished. His hearing is scheduled for Tuesday, May 27. Pence, a CCC truck driver, was arrested as he was driving a CCC truck from Columbus to the repair center at East Half Avenue and South Clinton Street.

In Prison Camp

FORMER owner and ruler of what was said to be the last purely feudal state in the world, the tiny island of Sark in the English Channel, the Dame of Sark has been placed in a German concentration camp, according to word received by a cousin in Cleveland. The island, with its 600 inhabitants, was seized by the Germans after the fall of France. The Dame of Sark is known in the United States as Mrs. Sybil Hathaway.

F. D. JR., TO QUIT HOSPITAL AFTER BEING TREATED

BOSTON, May 19—Cut and bruised about the face in a high-way accident which resulted from a blowout of a worn front tire, Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., was expected to be released from Massachusetts General Hospital today. Police said the son of the President lost control of the car in Walpole as a result of a blowout while returning to the Newport Naval Base after a visit with his brother John. Franklin Jr. is an ensign in the navy. The car lurched into an embankment and overturned, badly damaging the top and fenders.

EXPLAINING EGG YOLKS
WASHINGTON—Egg yolk is rich in vitamin A, although the color of the yolk may vary according to the feed the hen eats. The Agriculture Department explained if the hen eats plenty of green leafy feed or yellow corn, her eggs will have dark yolks. Feed with considerable fish-liver oil but low in pigments will produce pale-colored yolks.

is the ebullient Bob Reynolds of North Carolina, publisher of "The Vindicator", a newspaper sometimes charged with friendship for fascism. Apparently Senator Reynolds has a close working agreement with other isolationist senators for the benefit of his subscription list.

For when L. A. McGillivray of Monterey, California, wrote to Senator Wheeler and signed himself "L. A. (Quissing) McGillivray", Mr. McGillivray received in return a copy of Senator Reynolds' "Vindicator".

McGillivray, who vigorously disagrees with Wheeler, had written him a kidding letter saying: "Please look me up when you arrive on the West Coast. I have some ideas and perhaps we can cook something up." But apparently Wheeler and Reynolds took him seriously.

ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH

Real fact is that the deluge of letters had a lot to do with the change in Roosevelt's original plan to deliver a Pan-American speech May 14. Close advisers urged him to use the radio to mould public opinion, rather than let an organized mail campaign mould foreign policy.

Inside reasons for the subsequent postponement of the speech were: (1) he didn't think Congress was ready to go along on anything as drastic as convoys; and (2) this was one of the biggest decisions to be made by a President of the United States in 150 years, and Roosevelt didn't want to make it without further study.

CAPITAL CHAFF

During the recent uproar over Secretary Frances Perkins' bungling of defense strikes, Mrs. Roosevelt paid her an unexpected visit. Visitors heard cries of "Eleanor" and "Fanny" as the two prominent ladies embraced. Miss Perkins long ago would have been replaced but for the strong support of Mrs. Roosevelt. . . . Albert W. Hawkes, new U. S. Chamber of Commerce president, gets his liberal labor policies in part from his background. Forced to go to work at 15 as an office boy for a Chicago chemical concern, he eventually became its vice president. Most of his formal education was at night school. . . . Ex-Vice President Jack Garner is still using the official stationery supplied him free while he was in office. Washington friends have received letters from the Texan written on letterheads and sent in envelopes bearing his former title in embossed printing, which was partially scratched out with a pen.

INQUIRY BOARD STUDIES SEVEN AVIATOR DEATHS

DAYTON, May 19—An army board of inquiry was expected to report today on its findings in the crashes of two planes in southern Ohio which killed seven army aviators.

Five officers were killed when a twin-motored bomber crashed in Hocking County, and two captains were killed 10 miles south of Wilmington when their advanced trainer crashed. Both ships apparently were trying to make forced landings during Friday night's severe electrical storm.

VILLAGE TRAFFIC LIGHT IS GETTING MUCH ATTENTION

By S. D. Fridley
Phone, Ashville 79

That different kind of traffic light at Long and Main Streets with the moving hand revolving around the green and red discs attracts no small amount of attention from outside of state visitors, quite a few of them parking for a considerable while watching it in operation and several have taken time out asking many questions about it. Say they have never seen anything like in their travels. We refer to the T. A. Boor light which is the only one of its kind in operation.

Too short yet by a about a year to be in Grade One at school, Max Marion has turned boat manufacturer and has one all nailed together, painted red and ready to set sail in Walnut creek. Daddy Maynard, though we suspect, was chief designer and construction engineer. They'll be giving it its launching one of these days now soon, with bottle breaking ceremony and everything with "The Max Marion" hitting the waves.

That tale about an eagle being up in Madison could all be true enough, but knowing that township as we do, we'd much suspect that that eagle is either a rooster or a donkey. Too, since that 50-thousand acre cantonment in Chillicothe is said to be abandoned, it is to be located in parts of Walnut, Harrison and Madison Township. This is the "new story known for a fact" being in general circulation here. And these farmers here don't relish the idea any better than those down there.

Lightning, Friday struck a post in the back dooryard at the home of Lawrence Peters on East Main Street but other than destroying a metal clothes line did little damage.

Most all of the farmers we contacted here Saturday, thought it would be a couple of days before the open fields planted to corn would be dry enough for cultivation. Had some hail but little damage was done, they said.

The village council will be in session this evening paying current bills and maybe making plans for work needing to be done. . . . The Ashville-Harrison board of education will too be in session at the school office

ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH

Real fact is that the deluge of letters had a lot to do with the change in Roosevelt's original plan to deliver a Pan-American speech May 14. Close advisers urged him to use the radio to mould public opinion, rather than let an organized mail campaign mould foreign policy.

Inside reasons for the subsequent postponement of the speech were: (1) he didn't think Congress was ready to go along on anything as drastic as convicts; and (2) this was one of the biggest decisions to be made by a President of the United States in 150 years, and Roosevelt didn't want to make it without further study.

CAPITAL CHAFF

During the recent uproar over Secretary Frances Perkins' bungling of defense strikes, Mrs. Roosevelt paid her an unexpected visit. Visitors heard cries of "Eleanor" and "Fanny" as the two prominent ladies embraced. Miss Perkins long ago would have been replaced but for the strong support of Mrs. Roosevelt. . . . Albert W. Hawkes, new U. S. Chamber of Commerce president, gets his liberal labor policies in part from his background. Forced to go to work at 15 as an office boy for a Chicago chemical concern, he eventually became its vice president. Most of his formal education was at night school. . . . Ex-Vice President Jack Garner is still using the official stationery supplied him free while he was in office. Washington friends have received letters from the Texan written on letterheads and sent in envelopes bearing his former title in embossed printing, which was partially scratched out with a pen.

INQUIRY BOARD STUDIES SEVEN AVIATOR DEATHS

DAYTON, May 19—An army board of inquiry was expected to report today on its findings in the crashes of two planes in southern Ohio which killed seven army aviators.

Five officers were killed when a twin-motored bomber crashed in Hocking County, and two captains were killed 10 miles south of Wilmington when their advanced trainer crashed. Both ships apparently were trying to make forced landings during Friday night's severe electrical storm.

VILLAGE TRAFFIC LIGHT IS GETTING MUCH ATTENTION

By S. D. Fridley
Phone, Ashville 79

That different kind of traffic light at Long and Main Streets with the moving hand revolving around the green and red discs attracts no small amount of attention from outside of state visitors, quite a few of them parking for a considerable while watching it in operation and several have taken time out asking many questions about it. Say they have never seen anything like in their travels. We refer to the T. A. Boor light which is the only one of its kind in operation.

Too short yet by a about a year to be in Grade One at school, Max Marion has turned boat manufacturer and has one all nailed together, painted red and ready to set sail in Walnut creek. Daddy Maynard, though we suspect, was chief designer and construction engineer. They'll be giving it its launching one of these days now soon, with bottle breaking ceremony and everything with "The Max Marion" hitting the waves.

That tale about an eagle being up in Madison could all be true enough, but knowing that township as we do, we'd much suspect that that eagle is either a rooster or a donkey. Too, since that 50-thousand acre cantonment in Chillicothe is said to be abandoned, it is to be located in parts of Walnut, Harrison and Madison Township. This is the "new story known for a fact" being in general circulation here. And these farmers here don't relish the idea any better than those down there.

Lightning, Friday struck a post in the back dooryard at the home of Lawrence Peters on East Main Street but other than destroying a metal clothes line did little damage.

Most all of the farmers we contacted here Saturday, thought it would be a couple of days before the open fields planted to corn would be dry enough for cultivation. Had some hail but little damage was done, they said.

The village council will be in session this evening paying current bills and maybe making plans for work needing to be done. . . . The Ashville-Harrison board of education will too be in session at the school office
